EXPLANATORY NOTES

Irregularities in Spelling

These names were taken from the files of the County Clerk of Woodford County, Illinois, and were in all cases written by hand. Some mistakes in spelling may, therefore, be due to illegible penmanship, although every precaution was taken to clear the spelling by checking both the daily record book and the alphabetical register. Another source of error is the fact that the clerk apparently spelled quite frequently by sound and the applicant did not write his own name. In these cases I have attempted to combine all surnames that appear to be the same under the most likely spelling, with cross references to the various other spellings. The most notable examples of this is Eckstein and Schertz.

The reader will have to use common sense and considerable imagination in tracing variations in spelling if the name looked for does not appear under the spelling to which he is accustomed.

Licenses Issued but Not Returned

In many instances, licenses issued were never returned to the office of the County Clerk. Ordinarily, I should say this would indicate that one or the other of the contracting parties decided to call the marriage off. However, this may not be true in every instance, but may be due to carelessness on the part of the officiating minister, as in one case a license was returned by the minister after forty years or more. I have, therefore, included these names in the list, but the date is, of course, the date on which the license was issued rather than the date of marriage, since no proof exists that the marriage was performed. A notation is made concerning this irregularity in each case.

Method of Listing

All marriages are listed alphabetically under both names; under the man's name first, followed by the same list arranged under the names of the brides.

the same time, the author of the original work, or his heirs, may have had the right to receive payment for the use of their work. This right is known as the "copyright".

In the United States, the copyright law is contained in Title 17 of the United States Code. The law provides that the copyright owner has the exclusive right to reproduce, distribute, and display the work. The law also provides that the copyright owner has the right to license others to use the work.

The copyright law in the United States is very similar to the copyright law in other countries. However, there are some differences. For example, in the United States, the copyright law provides that the copyright owner has the right to sue for infringement of the copyright. In other countries, the copyright law may provide for a different remedy.

The copyright law in the United States is very complex. It is important to understand the copyright law in order to protect your rights as a copyright owner. If you have any questions about the copyright law, you should consult a lawyer who specializes in copyright law.
